THEME: "Recent Advances on Intelligent Technology Innovation"

About Kaohsiung

Located in southwestern Taiwan, Kaohsiung is Taiwan's second largest city. Kaohsiung used to enjoy a thriving economy for its steel and petrochemical industries, but now it is gearing towards cultural tourism, touting its history, nature and hospitality. An oceanic tourist capital it is!

Kaohsiung has a highly developed transport network, especially sea and air. In fact, Kaohsiung's ports are always filled with commercial and tourist ships from all over the world, and its international airport offers direct flights to and fro major Asian cities. Kaohsiung's railway and highway networks are also quite developed and convenient. The city's public transport is really advanced, including the rapid transit that's becoming more complete by day, as well as Taiwan's first light rail transit. All these make it much easier to enjoy Kaohsiung, especially cultural spots such as the world-famous Formosa Boulevard Station, diversified art installations, and boisterous street stands.
